NEWS SUMMARY.

-At New York yesterday evening gold closed at 81. -Cotton closed more active, with sales of 2500 bales; middlings 284a284. -In Liverpool at noon cotton was quiet, with sales of 8000 bales; uplands 12d. -A large emigration of Swiss colonists to

Tennessee is reported. -The price asked for the Paris Figaro newspaper is $500,000 in gold. The leader of the insurgents under arms near Sagua la Grande is an ex-Confederate officer, Rudolph Pole. -Quite a number of Northern manufacturers are reported to be looking about Weldon, North Carolina, with a view of establishing factories there. -An eccentric man of fifty, in Brooklyn, Conn., recently dug his own grave, sent for his friend to see him kill himself, and, leaning over the brink, shot himself through the head falling dead into the gra 7e. -Rochefort speaks in La Lanterne of the mother of Napoleon III as "that female of very loose morals, and, for a year or two, mistress of a rakish admiral named Verbuel; whose illegitimate son is so ashamed of his father that he does not even bear his name."

-The Cleveland Leader, a Radical journal, makes the following remarkable statement: "General Longstreet was one of the most brilliant leaders in the Confederate army. Again and again the caps of the Union soldiers were thrown up in huzzas of admiration at the intrapid conduct of his corps around him. Again and again his command would reform under the severest fire, and return to the charge as systematically as though manœuvring on a drill ground."

-The Bishop of New Jersey, it is said, has given notice that he will refuse at confirmation to lay his hands upon the piles of false hair and chignons which disguise the heads of so many young ladies seeking admission to the church and communion. The laying on of sacred hands at the altar upon so much rubbish gathered from the four corners of the earth, instead of the genuine natural hair or head, is deemed an offence to the law and gos

The monarchy for Spain seems now to be the settled determination of at least the temporary government of that country. Under the monarchical influences of the provisional government of three the Constitutional Cortes was elected. The Cortes in turn made one of the three the chief of the State, and continued others as ministers in power, and now we see by cable telegram that in the Cortes, on Tuesday, General Prim, Minister of War, announced to the deliberative body that the monarchists were prepared with their candidate for the throne, and that his name would soon be made

Louisiana died in Opelousas, La., on the 5th instant. He was a prominent member of the Secession Convention of 1861. When the war broke out he enhsted as a private in the 18th Louisiana, under Colonel Monton, and whilst serving in the ranks was elected to the Confederate Congress from the Opelousas District. In Congress he was an able member, and served until the downfall of the Confederacy, when he returned to Opelousas and resumed his duties as a lawyer and a citizen. Mr. Dapre enjoyed an unusual popularity and respect throughout southwestern Louisians.

The Chicagonese have reason to look for ward to a pretty healthy growth, but a recent estimate put forward by the exuberant Chicago press excites some comment among the envious rival villages of St. Louis and New York. This estimate of forty per cent. increase will give Chicago in the year 1900 fortynine millions of people, and, as the total population of the country increases only at the rate of three per cent. a year, in 1900 half of the 100,000,000 will live in Chicago, and before another century passes by, everybody, including the consumptives, will live in that city; or, more likely, the United States will be called -A Washington letter, speaking of the new postmistress for Richmond, Va., says : "General Grant says Mrs. Van Lew lost all the property she possessed, and ran the risk of losing her life in behalf of the Union cause during the rebellion. She resided in Richmond while the Federal army was besieging that city, and frequently furnished most valuable information to General Grant relative to the forces, positions, &c., of the Confederates, including diagrams and valuable documents, which were conveyed to the Union army by Mrs. Van Lew's two male slaves, in whose clothes were sewed up the communications intended for General Grant. In this way she lost her slaves, they remaining on the Union side, and of course

-The latest report from Washington is, that the administration has, upon due consideration, come to a conclusion identical with the opinion expressed by Senator Edmunds, that there is no impediment in the way of sending nominations to the Senate, whether for vacancies or removals; that the Tenure-of-office law is only operative during a recess of Congress, when the President cannot remove but may suspend an officer, and the latter can only be done for cause. But it is the opinion of Cabinet officers and sound lawyers generally that the President may in effect remove officers during a session of Congress by sending the nominations of a successor to the Senate and the latter confirming the same. This being the case, the President can proceed to nominate whenever he pleases, without restraint.

-Some amusement was created by a scene which occurred in the Senate on Tuesday, just after the adjournment of Congress. Mr. Sumner was engaged in earnest co ersation with a friend, when a young African, dressed in the height of fashion, accompanied by two females of the same "race and color," gorgeous in feathers and silks, approached, and, touching Mr. Summer on the shoulder, claimed acquaintance, and immediately presented his female friends to the great chempion of their race. The damsels were deligated to see Mr. Sumner, and each took a hand and settled themselves for a little talk over matters and things. Mr. Sumner did not seem, however, to appreciate their attention, and, with the best grace he could command, withdrew his hands, and, turning his back resumed the conversation which had been interrupted. The party were not pleased in the climate to prevent those resources at their reception, and one of the ladies remarked: "Well, I didn't think he would be so cool after all his beautiful talk about us; but white man is very uncertain."

-The Washington correspondent of the "General Butler continues his efforts in behalf of Joubert, the colored man, who desires the position of assessor of internal revenue at New Orleans. The object of General Butler is to induce the administration, in this case, to make a practical test of the professed friendship on the part of the Republican party for the negro citizens. Joubert, however, is not, by some, considered a fair type of the negro race upon whom to make the test in the distribution of official patronage. Joubert has no outward indication of African descent; be is as white as General Butler himself; is immensely wealthy, and has had a Parisian education, and is withal a high-toned, accomplished gentleman. The negro dodge in this case is fur-fetched; but it is likely to prove successful, for Joubert's friends give out that the President and Secretary of the Tressurv have signified their willingness to appoint him-Mr. Wolfley, the present incumbent of the office that Joubert seeks, is earnestly sustained by General Sherman and Senator Sherman. He has a good war record, and there are no charges on the file furnishing grounds for his removal, and his friends believe he will be retained."

CHARLESTON.

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 20, 1869. No Resurrection for South Carolina.

We have shown in a previous article how little truth there is in the assertion made by the Westminster Review, that throughout this State "abject and irrecoverable pov-"erty reigns." We now take up the assertion made in the book under review-that "South Carolina is utterly and helplessly As a general proposition it will, we pre sume, be admitted, that the prosperity of a country depends upon its natural advantages and resources, and upon the character of its people; it being conceded that healthiness of climate, fertility of soil, abundant mineral wealth and a commanding position on the highways of commerce. are only valuable in proportion to the skill, energy and perseverance with which the soil is cultivated, with which the hidden mineral is brought to light, and with which the current of trade is made profitable and advantageous. And in connection with this there will arise the consideration whether there is anything in the political or social condition of the people which should prevent them from resping the abundant harvest of success which our Great Mother offers to all her faithful servitors. The whole subject, then, has these three general divisions. 1. Our natural advantages and resources. 2. The character of our people. 3. Our political and social condition.

1. The natural advantages of South Carolina. This State has seven climatic divisions. 1st. The sea islands. 2d. The tidewater region. 3d. The belt of about fifty miles between the tide-swamp and the sand hills of the upper country. 4th. The sand hill belt of about thirty miles. 5th. The clay belt of about twenty miles. 6th. The granite belt of ninety miles. 7th. The mountains. Without attempting a detailed description of these different sections, we may say that, in addition to the well knewn long staple -Lucius J. Dupre, a prominent citizen of cotton, there may be produced on the sea nearly every semi-tropical fruit will grow there luxuriously. Olives, oranges, bananas, theE sparto grass, ramie, all may be grown on the sea islands, and there is no reason why there should not also be seen flocks of sheep and droves of portly cattle. In the tide-water region the cultivation of rice is carried on with great success, and it may be mentioned here that rice is now again being raised in the inland districts, it being found that the grains are larger than those of the tide-swamps, although the yield to the acre is much smaller. Throughout the upper sections of the State the short staple cotton is the principal crop, but tobacco and indigo may be cultivated to advantage. In certain sections the grape is grown in abundance, and the peaches of the State are too well known to need our praise. Generally it may be said that there is no valuable plant, fruit or vegetable which cannot be profitably produced in South Carolina. Nor have we any reason to avoid speaking of our minerals. We have gold in Spartanburg and other districts in considerable quantities, and we learn that in the fifteen months preceding June 1, 1853, the mines of Mr. Wm. Dorn, in Abbeville and Edgefield Districts, yielded gold of the value of $300. 000. But, more important than gold, we have iron of fine quality and lead in abundance. Besides this, we have the kaolin clay and buhr stones finer than those imported at heavy cost from France. And last and most important of our subterraneous treasures, are the bone deposits or phosphate beds which spread over many miles of country. One company alone owns 20,000 acres of these lands, and similar land in England has been let for two thousand dollars in gold per annum. It is the South Carolina phosphates which are expected to take the place of foreign guanes, when the supply of these shall fail, or when their price shall put them beyond the reach of the ordinary consumer. Eeveral companies are already engaged in mining the phosphate rock and preparing it for consumption. Its reputation is spreading rapidly, and tens of thousands of tons have found a ready market. And there is nothing in our climate which should make our fruits, our plants, our cotton and rice, our minerals and our phosphates, extremely difficult to work or prepare for sale. According to the census of 1860, the deaths per cent. in South Carolina were 1.41; against 2.06 in Arkansas, 1.45 in Kentucky, 1.76 in Louisiana, 176 in Marsachusetts, 1.35 in Connecticut and 1 22 in New York. This is the general per centage; but in Charleston, the principal city in the State, the deaths are much less, for the tables of mortality show that the deaths per cent. in this city are less than in either of the principal cities of Europe, or, with but two or three exceptions, in either of the Northern and Eastern States. Without, then, making any exaggerated statement, we may say that we have vast natura! resources, and that there is nothing from being turned to the best account.

But, beyond this, we may speak with pleasure of our system of internal communication; for South Carolina, which built the Baltimore Sun writes on Wednesday evening: | first long line of railroad in the United States, is now busily engaged in extending her railroad system and perfecting her communications. The great Blue Ridge Railroad, the direct road to the West, is in a fair way of completion. The South Carolina Railroad is bringing freight daily from St. Louis, Memphis, Mobile, Vicksburg and New Orleans. The Savannah and Charleston Railroad, which, with the Northeastern Railroad, completes the direct seacoast line of railroad travel from Portland, Maine, to the Gulf, will be opened throughout in less then twelve months. And this is not all. Charleston, the metropolis of South Carolina, is one of the finest seaports on the Atlantic coast. From her wharves can be seen the broad billows of the ocean. Her harbor is open at all seasons, and upon her bar is a sufficient depth of water for vessels of the capacity of four thousand and five thousand bales of cotton. Charleston is the natural outlet for the trade of the West, and when the Southern Pacific Railroad is built-and it will be built !- the commerce of the Indies and of the Pacific coast will flow to Charleston, there to pass, not to New York, but directly to Bremen, Havre and Liverpool. In ten years' time this shall be accomplished.

A few words now as to the character of our people. No one will doubt that South Carolina was highly prosperous before the war; no one will doubt that ours was a desperate condition when the war came to an end. But, as we have showed in a preceding article, the people were not daunted or cowed. They went at once to work, they worked hard, they kept on working, and notwithstanding the disturbing and dangerous influences of party politics, they produced last year cotton, rice, corn and other products to the value of at least twenty-five million of dollars. This is the best proof that can be given of the manhood and industry of the people of the State.

Who, thinking of these things, of what nature has done for us, and of the change in our prospects wrought by four years of work, will venture to say that South Carolina is utterly and helplessly crushed? The day of her new birth has come, each month adds to her strength, and in another decade she will be touching a height of good fortune of which her people scarcely dream, but which is a certainty, a fixed fact, in the minds of those who know this State and this people.

interview had with President Grant on Tuesday last by the Hon. J. P. Reed and Hon. W. D. Simpson, of this State, members of Congress elect. The paper which was read by Mr. Reed fairly expresses the views and opinions of the Democracy of South Carolina, and has our approval. We do not desire to see any factious opposition to the new administration, and while we have no faith in either General Grant or his Cabinet, we are ready to give "a hearty support to all such measures of the administration as will in our judgment tend to develope the resources and promote the interests of a common country."

To the following paragraph from the paper read by Mr. Reed, we call particular attention, as it confirms what we have again and again declared, and what is further still confirmed by the important document, published by us this morning, in which men of high rank and of all shades of opinion unite in declaring that investments are as safe here and will be as profitable as in any part of the country.

Mr. Read said: "The condition of the people "of South Carolina socially is and has been "one of profound peace, and aside from a few "isolated acts of personal violence that have occasionally been committed in different "parts of the State, such as are unfortunately of two common occurrence in all sections of the Union, good order has prevailed, and the laws, State and Federal, "enacted for their government by bodies in which they were unrepresented, have been respected obeyed and enforced without the "slightest tendency to tumult or violence."

We may add, upon good authority, that General Grant received Mr. Reed and Mr. Simpson very courteously, and spoke to them with a cordial warmth, of which there is no sign in the printed report of his reply.

PATAPSCO GUANO. Letter from James Pagan.

CHESTER, SOUTH CARALINA, January 6, 1869. Dear Sir-I have just received a communication rom Geo. W. Grafflin, Leq., Tressurer of Patapse Guano Company, requesting my opinion of the "PA-TAP-CO," to be sent direct to you-which I take pleasure in doing, as I sincerely believe that it is the best fertilizer now in use. I have tested its merits fully, and find those who have used it alongside of other popular fertilizers, do not hesitate to give i the preference: there are as many kinds in use here as there are merchants who deal in it. No two houses recommend the same kind, but during the last season I had a good opportunity of introducing the "PATAPSCO" GUANO to some extent.

I gave to ten (10) different planters 500 pounds Suano to put each on one acre of land, and agreed to take part of the product for pay. They all succeeded well. I got nearly 100 per cent. profit from the ten acres, and the planters are satisfied that they got 50 to 100 per cent, more than they could have expected on the same land without the GUANO. I also sold small quantities to some twenty or thirty planters, who tried it on all sorts of land. Some of then certify to wonderful results, and every one of them have engaged to take more for the coming season. expect to sell ten times the amount which was taken

I began in 1867, and have not heard one man say it did not over-pay him for his outlay. In some respects it must be superior to the Peruvian Guano. or instance, you can mix the seed with the PATAPS co, and the Peruvian must be covered before plan ing. The "Pararsco" acts at once upon the sprouts, as soon as it comes from the seed, and makes it star right off growing, and prevents the sickly stage which cotton, without the stimulus, has to go through-you know this. For two or three week the cotton plant is in a condition which is so pre carious that no planter can say that he has a certain stand I believe the "PATAPSCO" secures a better and more healthy stand than can be had by the application of any other fertilizer. I speak from ex periments made for two years. I have planted a little cotton for the purpose of watching the result, and am sure that rolling the seed in Paraesco GUANO will secure an early and healthy stand of cotton, which is like getting a good start in any kind of

I would recommend 250 to 300 pounds to the acre. I made 606 pounds lint from one acre by planting 500 pounds of "PATAPSOD," which made 260 pounds th year before without it, and the season of 1867 was better for cotton than 1863. The same field on the part not fertilized made more in 1867 than in '68, I thing it would pay best, however, for about 300 pounds to the acre. Respectfully, JAMES PAGAN. (Signed) For further information, apply to
